"Fashion Frolic" Gives Real Glimpse of Latest Modes From Paris Modistes
By Harriette Underhill
Last night at Moss's Broadway a man sitting behind us in the loge remarked at the close of the Fashion Frolic, "I'll tell the world that's some pretty classy show," and we wanted to turn around and say, "And I'll tell the Tribune."

There is only one drawback—it makes one dissatisfied with the clothes one has and makes one long for the clothes one hasn't.
There is one silver and blue dinner gown there that would make any amount of extravagance an economy in the long run, and we tried to find Mr. Moss afterward to put in a bid for it. Life never will be the same again without it.
The Fashion Frolic, which Richard Bennett is presenting, is divided into three acts—morning, afternoon and evening. The models are as beautiful as the costumes and there are moments when each is seen without the other—for instance, in one scene called "The Secrets of the Boudoir," which made the women gasp and the men applaud sheepishly. No wonder Miss Corrie is called "a vision in black chintilly," only the program said it in French. Really, though, no secrets are revealed in this scene. Madame comes in a

Cardinal Hartmann Dead; Was Kaiser's Emissary

COLOGNE, Nov. 11.—Cardinal Felix von Hartmann, Archbishop of Cologne, is dead at his residence here.
Cardinal Hartmann came into prominence during the war when he requested the Pope to intervene to prevent the dismemberment of Germany after the armistice. Again last May he asked the Pope to protect Germany from the peace conditions of the Allies.

During the early days of the war Cardinal Hartmann caused some adverse comment in Germany by issuing a pastoral letter directing that a petition for peace be included in the prayers of Catholics. In the latter part of 1915 he was sent by Emperor William on a mission to the Pope, supposed to have peace for its object. In 1916 Cardinal Hartmann was a leader of the Pan-Germans and while on a visit to the Western front he assured the Emperor that all Catholic soldiers were ready for further sacrifices. In May, 1918, in response to Cardinal Hartmann's request, the Allies refrained from air attacks on Cologne or Corpus Christi Day. On the same day the Germans continued to shell Paris with their long-range gun, violating the implied truce.

Cardinal Hartmann was born at Muenster, Westphalia, sixty-eight years ago. He was created a Cardinal on May 25, 1914, and in January, 1918, he was appointed a member of the Prussian House of Lords.

Morals and Principles

By DR. BERTHOLD A. BAER

"Your success in business depends on what others think or say of your establishment or your methods."
"The successful man knows that honesty of purpose and honest goods contribute more to success than 'good luck.'"
"Add to these hard work, efficient service, character, strength and integrity and you have the man who is happy because he is chosen to serve."
It was my good fortune to be present at one of the regular meetings of the employees of The Funeral Church, Campbell Building, Broadway at 66th Street, which was presided over by Frank E. Campbell, its founder-proprietor.
That I was surprised at what Mr. Campbell said to his associates, expresses my feelings only mildly.
Until now I had thought that "undertakers" were something uncanny, something "pleasant-touche."
I, as well as my friends, pictured an "undertaker" as a man with a sad face, wearing a long, black "Prince Albert Coat," with trousers three inches too long and a black tie two inches too wide.
While here was an aggregation of men, acting like regular human beings, dressing like real men and talking about business morals and business principles.
"Ever attended one of our evening funeral services?" asked Mr. Campbell.
I had not.
"Then come around to-night. You will find the building magnificently lighted by 'standards' of my own design. You will find every employee who in any way has anything to do with the funeral service attired in full dress."
"You will hear the strains of our electric pipe organ and the rich blending voices of our quartette. Won't you come?"
I did come and I heard and saw everything Mr. Campbell said.
I also heard what the people said who attended the beautiful service, and looking over the almost indescribably beautiful institution I realized that all of this could have been built up only by giving real
